Legacies

There are projects that take years to come to maturity. There are projects, the meaning of which seems obscure to their protagonists, but logical to those looking on. There are projects in which it is perfectly clear where they are going, as soon as all the elements are united. There are projects that only see the light of day thanks to the marriage of worlds that are poles apart from each other.

This project "Legacies" only came into existence because a family wanted to work creatively together, to narrate what is handed down from generation to generation. Our separate paths have enabled us to reflect on the differences and similarities that we have been able to find in each other's work, all those narratives and those distinct rituals that determine the here and now, but also everything that happens in a subtle, implicit, indirect, unconscious manner. This "transgenerational story" conjured up in our minds the cycles of life and incited us to make a journey, from the sounds of our childhood to the lamenting at the end, passing through all the different emotional states that mark a life, or rather lives, the lives that are brought together in this project.

Our aim is to try to create parallels, communing perhaps between the different legacies that the members of this extended family have received from the preceding generations, the legacy that we have forged for ourselves on our own individual path, opened up to us by the curiosity that we share for the sounds of our world...
